Sneak Preview

"You must have me mistaken for someone else"

Richard Danger said to the faceless voice in the night.

"They told me to look for a man. Tall, handsome and an incredible detective." the velvety voice replied.

Richard Danger turned to face the direction of the voice. Nothing but ghosts and shadows.

"Maybe you have found the right man."

"Do you know french?"

"About as good as a turtle can do the Viennese waltz."

"We can work on that on the plane."

"Plane? Where are we going."

The owner of the voice stepped out of the shadows. Richard wasn't prepared for who it was. His ex-wife died in an unfortunate moonshine-making accident years ago. Yet here she was standing before him.

"I thought you were dead. You fell in the vat of the 80-proof" said Richard.

"Baby" She took a long drag from her cigarette before exhaling. The cigarette smoke seemed to take on an apparition.

"I am death-proof."
